

“War News”

00:00 – 00:27

(Music)

00:27 – 00:30

News anchor: We interrupt our scheduled programs to bring you the news of the war.

00:30 – 00:32

(Short music)

00:32 – 00:38

N A: Unfortunately, out of the population of one million, only one hundred thousand have survived.

00:38 – 00:40

(Short music)

00:40 – 00:44

N A: Famine and hunger plagues the survivors.

00:44 – 00:46

(Short music)

00:46 – 00:50

N A: Some of the survivors have found refuge in Bandar Torkaman.

00:50 – 00:52

(Short music)

00:52 – 00:56

N A: The war is still raging on furiously.

00:56 – 00:58

(Short music)

00:58 – 01:07

N A: I've just been informed that we are live with our reporting colleague who is there with the refugees. Dear colleague, greetings.

01:07 – 02:47

Reporter: Greetings

(Sea sound effect)

N A: We are waiting to hear your report on the refugees' situation.

R: Yes, as you all know, this full-blown war has left many people homeless and in order to at least keep the survivors alive, they have been transferred to this camp in Bandar Torkaman... to know more about the state of the war, I want to talk to some of the survivors... Hello ma'am.

Refugee 1: Hi.

R: Ma'am. You've also lost your home?

Ref 1: Unfortunately, we've lost everything! Our home! Our life! We couldn't even find food to eat! Thank God we found this place.

R: Is this your daughter? Little lady... come closer...

Ref 1: She's afraid. Very afraid! Come a little closer, dear.

R: Why are you looking at the sea like that, dear?

Refugee 2: Because our home was just on the other side of this sea. It was beautiful. It was so nice...

R: Is this place good?

Ref 2: Here...at least we won't go hungry!

R: The sorrow of these refugees is indescribable! Their eyes are filled with tears. Everyone has lost a part of their family, and, according to the experts, they're lucky to be alive. It's a horrifying situation.

N A: Thank you so much for preparing this report for us. We say goodbye to you.

R: I will be staying here among the refugees and report to you later. Goodbye for now.

02:47 – 02:54

(War sound effect)

02:54 – 03:25

N A: This is the sound of war...massacre and homelessness... No doubt you're all asking yourselves where in the world is this raging war going on and which countries are responsible for it. Surely, you're asking yourselves why the international organizations are not doing anything to stop this and bring the perpetrators of this devastating war to justice for their actions.

03:25 – 03:49

(Air raid siren sound)

03:49 – 03:57

N A: You may not believe it, but this war is happening right now, near you, but you don't see it.

03:57 – 4:57

(Music starts)

N A: Yes, near all of us...in the Caspian Sea...

N A: It's a pity that the Caspian seals can't talk, otherwise, our reporter could actually talk with them. And surely, you would have heard them say the same things you just heard.

N A: The Caspian seal population has dropped from one million to one hundred thousand...they have no food to eat...their situation is terrible. A small population of them are being taken care of in Bandar Torkaman so that, maybe, they can escape extinction. And we are the perpetrators of this war...we ourselves...by endless killings...by destroying food sources...you and I are to blame. This is war!

Are we paying attention?
